The "George Washington"
Will Not Arrive at Plymouth
Until Friday Forenoon

DEPRIVED OF A DAY

Secretary Will Confer With
Prime Minister MacDonald
Upon His Arrival

By George R. Holmes

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ABOARD S. S. GEORGE WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Bucking a sixty-mile an hour gale, the George Washington proceeded at reduced speed toward England today, dashing the hopes of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson for a Thursday midnight arrival at Plymouth.

It is now impossible for the George Washington to arrive at Plymouth before Friday forenoon. While Secretary Stimson is naturally disappointed that this set-back will deprive him of the full extra day he had hoped for in which to carry out preliminary conferences before the 5-power disarmament parley begins, he has accepted the circumstances philosophically.

The one consolation is that this later arrival will enable the good burghers of Plymouth to extend the ceremonial welcome they had planned, and which was disrupted when news came that Mr. Stimson had asked that the liner be speeded up to arrive at midnight.

The Plymouth welcome, according to the information aboard ship, has now been fixed for 8 a. m. Friday, with the delegation's departure for London fairly early Friday afternoon.

It is understood that Secretary Stimson will confer with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald immediately upon his arrival in London. The Secretary of State wireless word to Premier Andre Tardieu of France and Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy, in response to their requests, that he would meet with them on Sunday. The entire American delegation to the conference dropped its official role last night in order to participate in the captain's ball, a gala affair.

All appeared in costume, and many members of the delegation danced with their wives, despite the fact that the ship pitched considerably in the heavy seas.

The George Washington's present speed is about 16 knots. Before the wind impeded her progress, she was making nearly 20.

Burial Today of Body Found in Woods Near Here

Burial was made here today of the body of a man found in a wood near the Neshaminy Creek at Bridgewater last Friday afternoon. Internment was made in Bristol Cemetery by the H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers, at whose morgue the body has been since discovery.

The man, who is believed to be a suicide, was found by Harry C. Bossler, of 561 Otter street.

The dead man was believed to be John Schmit, of 2543 North Second street, Philadelphia. When found there was beside the body an empty bottle which had contained a disinfectant; and a newspaper with pencilled notes upon it.

One of the notations read: "All information about John Schmit at 2543 North Second street, Philadelphia. Upon inquiry at that address by Philadelphia Detective Bureau, the occupants of the house would not claim the body."

More About the Merry Masqueraders By "The Stroller"

An article of interest to Bristol readers appeared in the latest issue of the Quakertown Free Press. It was published in the editorial columns of that paper and is herewith given in full:

Looks as though we had started something. Last week's comment on the Merry Masqueraders brought forth a reply from one whom, now that he has written us, we can picture as getting a big "kick" out of that organization thirty years ago. Read what Chauncey Stoneback, ex-Burgess of Quakertown, now prosperous and popular business man of Bristol, has to say:

"I notice in your editorials of this week that you mention the Masqueraders of thirty years ago. I remember it very well, and it made me sit and study to remember some of the other fellows who were 'it,' namely, John V. Ommereen, Richard Kramer, C. Taylor Leland, Mr. Davis, superintendent of the trolley; Reuben J. Freed, of Richlandtown, and about thirty others whose names I cannot remember."

"We certainly were 'it.' I remember we congregated in the old trolley depot on East Broad street, and when we were ready to leave there we took a trolley to Richlandtown and to Perkasie, then returned to George Moser's restaurant where we had a wonderful banquet, (?) except myself. I had a beautiful black silk dress on, and fur coat, large hat and wonderful blonde curls."

"My trouble was, I had to draw myself in so as to get a corset on to get inside of the dress. Everything was O. K. until I sat down to eat. I found it was drawn together, I could not eat. So I hurried home on Front street to get my corset off—could not unhook it, so Friend Wife used a butcher knife and cut the strings in the rear (I think they are called strings) and I sat for one hour trying to get my lungs filled again. Hope you can get the gang together (what are left of us.) But no more corsets for me!"

Thanks, Chauncey, for this choice bit of history. You have revealed a mine of memories that we hope will be "opened and worked" to the utmost satisfaction of all concerned and interested. And now that the ball has started rolling, our next move is to lay the proposition before the Halloween committee and ask their support in having a reunion of the Merry Masqueraders of Thirty Years Ago.

In the meantime we'll have to ask Reuben, Dick and some of the others if they have any 'confession' to make.

FRAZIER HUNT, NOTED WRITER, TELLS ABOUT THE IDEALS OF SOVIET RUSSIA

Gives Startling Pen Picture of the Crusading Spirit Which Is Driving Russia's Backward Millions to Industrialization,
With Its Two Great Goals; Slogan, "Be Like America"

(Editor's Note.—This is the first of a series of six articles on the "New Revolution in Russia," which Frazier Hunt, noted newspaper man, war correspondent, magazine writer, staff writer and editorial representative in Europe for Cosmopolitan Magazine, has written especially for the Courier and other International News Service clients.)

Mr. Hunt has written about Russia before. He knows Russia. He is one of the very few among the great many who have written about Russia in the past eleven years who has been able to grasp the new psychology of the Soviet movement. In this series of articles he brings this psychology so close to the reader that the latter recognizes it for a real, living animate being.

Eleven years ago, when the newspapers and magazines of the United States, and most other countries of the world, were prophesying the collapse of the "Bolshevik regime," and military leaders of other countries were planning military invasion of Russia to stifle the "Red" movement, Mr. Hunt, alone, in Moscow lifted his voice to remark: "This thing is real; it is alive, it will live."

Mr. Hunt "covered" the World War on the western front, the Versailles Conference, obtained for a time the first copy of the Versailles Treaty, "covered" the American and allied expeditions in Siberia and is the only newspaper correspondent who ever obtained a personal interview with the Prince of Wales.

In this first article Mr. Hunt gives a startling picture of the crusading spirit which is driving Russia's backward millions to industrialization and mechanization. This crusading spirit has a preliminary or temporary goal, and a final, idealized goal.

The first goal is to "be like America." The second, the idealized goal, is to "catch up with and pass America." In the end, industrialized, mechanized production.

How to do this? Mr. Hunt (tells you.)

LONDON, Jan. 16.—"Learn from your enemies!"

That is what Lenin preached—and that is the story of Russia.

Today Soviet Russia is being Americanized, so that she can win the world from America. She is learning from her enemies.

It is the greatest story in the world. It is the greatest story of the century—greater than the World War—the passing of half the monarchs of Europe—greater than the death of ten million men and the destruction of five hundred billion dollars worth of property.

One who writes of the Soviet union today is writing history. It is future history—the future that must be weighed and told in terms of the past and the present.

America has caught the imagination of Russia; the efficiency of our machine age, our mechanization and industrialization has captured the kind of every living man in the great sprawling land that stretches over one-sixth of the face of the globe. The dullest peasant in the most distant "Dark Village" in Russia has heard the hum of the American machine, brought to his ears by the magic waves of ideas that know no international boundaries of respect no international barriers.

It is America's day in Russia. "Stavka Na America" is the newest slogan—"Bet on America."

Then there is "Catch Up With and Pass America."

And then the third: "Kato Kogo?"

BRISTOL TO BENEFIT FROM DEEPER RIVER

Dredging of Channel to 20
Feet Expected to Bring Industries Here

MONEY APPROPRIATED

Bristol is keenly interested and like other towns along the Delaware River expects to benefit from the deepening of the river channel to a depth of 20 feet.

What the completion of this channel, which will permit vessels of heavier draft, such as are engaged in the coastal trade, to ascend the Delaware, tapping the areas along the river banks, will mean, is seen in the prediction of Richard Weglein, Director of Wharves, Docks and Ferries.

"Ten years after the work on the twenty-foot channel is completed we will see the entire district on both sides of the Delaware lined with manufacturing plants," he said. "Beyond the limits of Philadelphia there will be a development all the way to Trenton."

Industrial development bordering the Delaware above Philadelphia has been retarded by the inability of the larger draft vessels to ascend the river, he points out. The twenty-foot channel will admit direct shipments from the plants already there and those which will be attracted into that area, besides increasing the flow of business from the many plants already in operation.

Lieutenant Colonel G. B. Pillsbury, the Philadelphia district engineer, has pointed out that with Trenton now a party to the project, the work on the new twenty-foot channel may be started this season. The program

ONE HUNDRED IN JAIL LAST YEAR ON BOOZE CHARGE

Fifty Others Were Committed For Short Terms For Drunkenness

490 PRISONERS IN 1929

Five Hundred and Twenty-One Were Discharged
In Year

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16.—Prohibition has failed to decrease the number of prisoners that get into the Bucks County Prison according to the figures taken from the docket of Head Keeper Grant Myers.

During 1929 there were exactly 100 persons committed to the prison to stand trial in court for violation of the liquor laws and for a violation of the automobile law that makes it a crime to operate an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. This is an increase over the previous year.

In addition to the liquor law violators and drunken drivers there were approximately fifty others committed to the prison to serve short terms for being drunk and disorderly in 1929.

During 1929 there were 490 prisoners committed to the prison and 521 were discharged, sixty others being held over from 1928. There were twenty-nine prisoners on the docket on January 1, 1930. The average number of prisoners per day in 1929 was 50, a slight decrease over the previous year.

The Court sentenced sixty defendants to serve terms in the county prison in 1929. Justices of the peace sentenced eighty-six defendants to serve terms on summary convictions.

During 1929 there were 246 defendants discharged from the prison by Justices of the Peace. These defendants never got into the county court.

There were twenty-four juveniles in the house of detention in 1929, an under sixteen.

There were twenty-eight women incarcerated in the county prison in 1929, a considerable increase over 1928. This was due to several raids on road houses.

The prison docket shows that four murderers were in prison last year, Calvin D. James was electrocuted last January; Giuseppe Guida is sentenced to die on February 3; Maria Thlotta was sentenced to life imprisonment for second degree murder; and Guicomo Guicardo was sentenced to life imprisonment for second degree murder.

SOUND FINANCING

Debts and deficits being the bane of a nation's existence, it is not surprising that the American people begin 1930 at peace with themselves and all the world and with a kind word for the custodians of their public coffers at Washington.

From a treasury deficit of $168,475,696 a year ago the starting of the new year with a surplus of $91,644,655 beats the blue bird as a purveyor of happiness and trimming down the public debt another round billion dollars to a remainder of $16,309,921,501 is alone reason enough for national rejoicing.

The Coolidge administrations showed the public how important it is from the executive's viewpoint for the national government to end its year with a surplus, a pleasure the Hoover administration can look forward to as the fiscal year ending next June 30 is promised a nice surplus by the present treasury outlook.

Even with the reduction of the tax rate on 1929 incomes, which is computed in revenue dollars at $160,000,000 the surplus for the current fiscal year may be larger than is now expected. That is the promise held forth by the trend of income tax collections.

Another gratifying sign from the taxpayer's viewpoint is the treasury report that the expenditures of the federal government for the first half of the present fiscal year were considerably less than half of the budget for the entire year. That represents governmental economy and that means more than anything else to the tax-burdened public.

THE PUBLIC LANDS

It has been said that the mistakes of the federal government with regard to conservation have been due to politics rather than to policy. There is no reason, therefore, to believe that interference from politics would be lessened if the federal land reserves and public lands were to be transferred from federal control to the control of the states in which they are located. In fact, it is no secret that one of the reasons for the agitation to that end is that the local political and business interests which wish to have easier access to the lands and forest for purposes of exploitation would find the state authorities more amenable than the federal government. Remember the oil reserve scandal!

For the present, at least, the machinery can best be operated by the federal government. If the reserves are a white elephant on the hands of the administration at Washington, all the more reason for control to remain there. That white elephant might get worse treatment at the hands of several state governments that are even more at the mercy of grasping politicians than is the national government.

There will be cause for suspicion should the commonwealths having federal lands be found in a receptive mood when the national government makes a serious move to turn the lands over to the states. The history of state's rights and centralization of government contains few instances where the federal government has turned back powers to the commonwealths and where those powers have been gratefully received by the states. There is a nigger in the woodpile!

In spite of the way some look, no auto is more than 30 years old.

SYNOPSIS
Joe Lane, ex-pugilist, song plugger, and hit of the Q. R. S. A. radio station, gets a contract to make phonograph records through the efforts of Arthur Phillips, manager of the station. Phillips, who is infatuated with Katherine, Joe's wife, informs the girl that he is making Joe a success only for her sake.

Katherine is furious, but tears to tell Joe, who believes Phillips to be his best friend, lest he quarrel with the manager. Joe promises to meet Katherine for lunch, but gets into a scrap game instead. He finally arrives home where Katherine and the baby, Little Pal are waiting for him.

CHAPTER IV
Joe squirmed uneasily. He was in for it now. Like Little Pal, he realized that when Katherine spoke in that tone of voice and said she wanted to talk to him, she meant business. He braced himself for the ordeal. Well, he deserved all she was going to say, he told himself.

"Now, listen, honey," Joe went over to Katherine, his eyes downcast. "Don't put the saddle on me. I know I've caused you a lot of trouble. I'm irresponsible, like you say, and all over the place. But you know how much I love you. And maybe if I wasn't so sorta batty I wouldn't be a song plugger at all. I'd be a bricklayer or something."

"Possibly," Katherine returned coldly. "And possibly we'd be happier if you were." She walked past Joe and went over to the grand piano leaning against it. "We're not suited to each other, Joe."

"Aw, Kitty, darling! Don't say that," Joe begged. "You know you don't mean it. Why, I'm crazy about you. Say, did all this come outa my standin' you up this afternoon and takin' a few drinks with the boys?"

"No, it wasn't that, Joe. It wasn't just because of that time. But because of the dozens of times you've forgotten and neglected me. 'Oh, I know; but, sweetheart, I won't do it again. Honest, I won't. This is the last time, I promise!'"

"Joe, if I hear you say 'I promise' once more I'll—I'll—" Kitty floundered for words. "I don't know what I'll do. You've told me that one hundred times if you've told me once. Every time you say it I think you mean it. And then I find out right away you don't."

"Aw, Kitty," Joe wandered across the room and tried to take the girl in his arms. "I know I ain't good enough for you—I never was. But I'd do anything in the world for you."

Katherine evaded Joe's caresses. "It isn't a question of goodness," she tried to explain. "It's more a question of dispositions of nature. I'm staid and conventional, I suppose. You're happy-go-lucky, careless—well, I don't know." She shook her head wearily. "We all have a right to be what we are. Maybe your way is the best—maybe mine is. No one can say, but—"

"But, honey, if you don't like me like I am I'll change," Joe offered eagerly. "I'll make myself over just for you."

"It can't be done, Joe."

"Sure it can!," Joe insisted. "Why, look how I've changed already since I met you. Gee, I'm certainly a lot different from that paluka prizefighter I was when you first saw me. Don't you remember, Kitty?"

His voice was pleading, yet without a little gay. Memories came flooding back to him—memories that he wanted to bring to Kitty. "Remember how hard I fell for you the very first time I saw you?" he reminded her. "Me, up there in the hospital, all battered up, and you so white and beautiful in your nurse's uniform. Honestly, the first time I saw you I thought I'd died and gone to Heaven. I thought you were an angel. No kidding, I did—until I smiled the antiseptic."

Katherine didn't even smile. "We got started wrong, Joe," she shook her head. "You remember you told me you had been hurt in an automobile accident. You didn't tell me you were a prize fighter. And I believed you—just like I've gone on believing you. You lied to me from the very first. Oh, it was no way to do. I see it now."

"Sure, I lied to you, darling," Joe thrust his hands into his pockets and began walking about the room. "I wasn't gonna tell you I got all smeared up like that. I could tell that just by lookin' at you. But, gee whiz, when a fellow's in love with a girl he ain't responsible for what he says. And a guy's entitled to lie a little when he's makin' love."

"Oh, Joe, what's the use of all this?" Kitty sank dejectedly onto the piano bench. "We've gone over it again and again. Our marriage was a mistake, that's all."

Joe's hands clenched tightly in his pockets. He closed his eyes, hard, for a moment. "You loved me when you married me, didn't you, Kitty?" He tried to keep his voice steady.

"Yes, Joe, with all my heart."

"But—but you don't love me any more. Is that it?"

wanted to lecture him. He could sense it coming. Of course he shouldn't have kept her waiting, but there were times when a lot of things might be excused—a time like this, for instance.

Mamma, I want to hear Daddy's record," Daddy, I can hear the record, can't I?"

Joe looked at Katherine, Junior looked at Katherine, both waiting for her answer. And Joe, as he stood there, wore the same expression on his face as Junior. It was a voiceless, child-like expression.

But about Katherine's lips there came a little line of grim determination. She seemed so stern, so evidently resolute, that for once Joe was almost frightened.

"Run right along, Junior," she commanded, going over to the French doors that opened off into the bedrooms and unlatching them.

Junior reached up his arms to his father for one last kiss. There was no denying his mother when she assumed that tone. It meant that he was to do exactly as he was told. He clutched his father tightly about the neck as Joe swung him up again in his arms. At that moment there seemed to be a bond of sympathy between the two which Katherine recognized, even in her anger. And it made it all the harder for her to carry out her resolutions.

"Run along, now, Little Pal, like Mamma says," Joe whispered tenderly to the child. "Daddy's gonna sing over the radio tonight, and then you can hear him just like on the record. Daddy's gonna sing your song."

"Aw wight, Daddy," Fortified with his father's promise the child was content to be put down.

Katherine took the boy's hand and led him into the bedroom.

As the pair disappeared Joe began to frown thoughtfully. He picked up the package he had thrown aside when he came in and slowly unwrapped it, holding up a violeta record—his very first. He had felt so much pleasure in seeing it earlier in the day, but now all his joy was gone, and he felt lost.

ANNOUNCE NEW TRUCK WHICH HAS SPEED

Rugged Chassis Construction Is Also Feature of The Willys-Knight

CAR ON DISPLAY HERE

Speed comparable to that of passenger cars, with the extreme power and rugged chassis construction necessary to satisfy the severest demands of modern day commercial transportation, is found in the new Willys Six 1½ ton truck announced by Willys-Overland. Four speed transmission and 65 horsepower engine meet all the requirements for heavy hauling and provide unusually satisfactory performance on the highway, according to Jenks H. Watson, local distributor.

Announcement of this truck, together with a new Willys-Knight truck as additions to the already large truck line manufactured by Willys-Overland, reveals a new idea in commercial car manufacture which, for the first time, gives the commercial car buyer as large a range of selection as is offered the purchaser of a passenger car.

Opportunity to select exactly the type of commercial car best fitted for any particular work is expected to make possible the replacement of many heavy duty trucks by lighter equipment, such as the Willys-Six, with a resultant saving in capital invested, operating cost and depreciation.

With these two additions, Willys-Overland now offers a four cylinder and a six cylinder truck in the one-half ton class; the speedy new Willys Six, Model C 101, and the Willys-Knight, Model T-103, in the ¾ to 1½ ton class, and the heavy duty Willys-Knight trucks in the 2 and 2½ ton class. In addition to these are the commercial roadsters and coupes, intended primarily as salesmen's cars and designed to permit the installation of open and closed bodies of the slip-on type.

To provide added strength, stamina and reliability, all the vital parts of Willys-Overland trucks, such as frame, transmission, clutch, propeller shaft, rear axle, wheels, rims, etc., are special truck parts, no passenger car units being used.

Distribution and servicing of these trucks will be accomplished through the nationwide Willys-Overland dealer organization, all members of which will be equipped to give specialized service on all Willys-Overland trucks, as well as to arrange for the selection and delivery of the various types of bodies desired.

This will make it possible for a truck owner to secure repairs, parts and service wherever he may be without the customary delay and is expected to be of immense value to the fleet operator who might otherwise have units of his fleet laid up where service is not available.

Through cooperation between Willys-Overland sales and engineering departments and the leading builders of commercial bodies, a national distribution of high grade body types to fit every need of commercial use has been effected. Arrangements have been made so that the buyer of a commercial chassis will be able to select the particular type of body he prefers and have it delivered by the body manufacturers with his chassis, thus making possible immediate assembly and eliminating delays.

The New Willys Six Truck

Advanced engineering, evident throughout the construction of the new Willys Six 1½ ton truck, promises long life and low depreciation, safety and ease of operation, with extremely low mileage costs. The high speed of this model has been achieved without sacrifice of any of the qualities of reliability, safety or stamina essential in a commercial car. It has been designed primarily to lower the cost of deliveries and speed up distribution of merchandise.

Notable among the mechanical features is the four speed forward transmission which should have a marked appeal for all truck operators, providing as it does added pulling ability in low gears and the ability to make a quick start with a capacity load. The high gear provides smooth speed on straightaways.

The engine is entirely new and develops an actual 65 horsepower at 3200 r. p. m. It has a 3¼ inch bore, a 3½ inch stroke and a piston displacement of 192.9 cubic inches. The motor is of the efficient L head type, with cylinders and crankcase cast en bloc. The cylinder head is removable.

The Willys Six has a wheelbase of 131 inches, designed to accommodate a wide variety of body types, including the panel body, fully enclosed with two rear doors, which meets the requirements of many kinds of business; the canopy top body with curtains at the sides and rear to provide protection for merchandise in bad weather which is especially desirable for grocers, butchers and most retail stores; the screen body type with a gate that locks to provide protection for merchandise, mail, etc., against theft; a stake body with extra large capacity for contractors, express companies, wholesalers and farmers; and the popular open express type with roomy comfortable driving compartment.

One of the most important features of the Willys Six truck is the rear axle, which is of the semi-floating type with heavy spiral bevel gears, and the

Records That Can't Be Broken

THE PEN may be mightier than the sword, but it isn't half as powerful as the new material that is to be used for phonograph records. If the newsreel pictures and the talkies are accurate criteria the pen together with the printing press may be due for a long vacation. And the spoken word will indeed be ruler of a new kingdom where newspapers and magazines will emerge in the guise of phonograph records.

The new and wonderful material announced recently by Doctors Louis Hammett and George H. Walden, Jr. is called "Durium" and is all that its name implies. For it is durable to the point of unbreakability and of equal flexibility, making it ideal for phonograph records in particular. But not the old type of record that dropped when any one looked at it. Not by a long shot! The new durium records can do duty as a tea-pot stand, a dinner plate, a door-mat or a nice toy for baby without in the least impairing their efficiency or tonal properties.

Durium is so inexpensive that it is planned to issue standard sized records each week, to be retailed at 15 cents apiece through such agencies of distribution as newsstands and various retail stores in much the same way as the weekly magazine is marketed. It is easy from this to visualize the time when the weekly paper will consist of records amplifying the newsreel pictures that have taken such a hold on popular imagination. Talking pictures will also be made of durium, which has the added advantage of emerging from the mails intact regardless of the handling to which it has been subjected.

All this seems so far away from the little brittle wax disc that was used by Thomas Edison to record voices for his phonograph. It was so soft that after having been played for admiring neighbors a few times its easily marred surface was so scratched or chipped that one of Sousa's marches sounded like a record of a menagerie of wild animals before feeding time. And now that the new material promises us practically unbreakable records, in addition to all the other marvels of the age, we may still witness a revival of the gramophone that has of late been eclipsed by so many other marvels. We may even read our recorded newspapers from it.

Frazier Hunt, Tells About Ideals of Soviet Russia

cars, she loves, the individualism, the concentration of wealth.

The whole "capitalistic system" (and how they delight in mouthing these words) she hates.

She hates it with all the ardor and depth of sincerity that a young priest of the great Jesuit crusades hated the infidels and the works of the devil loose in the world.

For to understand this vast Russian scene one must accept the fact that the power and driving force of this communistic government and ideal is the power and force of a crusading religion. Whether we like it or not this is true, and it is absolutely necessary to grasp this great truth.

Communist youths are today young priests of this new militant faith. They have the look in their eyes. They fear nothing. They will gladly sacrifice their lives, their future, their all, for their dream of a new, classless, moneyless world, where all men are the same; where there are no distinctions of any kind; where white and brown and yellow and black men are brothers and equals.

They dream of building a great new world that will be better than America can build.

So it is that Russia and America struggle for the world—for this very soul of the world.

It is a strange new war—a bloodless war. It is not for trade, nor territories, nor any of the old ideas of victory and conquest that the empires of the past fought for. It is a silent war of ideals struggling against each other for the heart and imagination of the world.

And America is building up Russia to prepare her for the epic struggle.

We are showing her how to construct great factories, magnificent electric plants, giant mills, to harness her rivers, produce her white coal, how to treble the output of her black coal to coax water from distant rivers to make rich cotton and fruit lands from parched and thirsty deserts; how to put motor cars on her muddy roads and then build roads of macadam; how to put tens of thousands of tractors on her endless rich acres; how to buy shoes and clothes and silk stockings and electric light and radio and the thousand little comforts and amenities of life for her hungry and tired families.

(Editor's Note: In tomorrow's article Mr. Hunt explains the difference between the Lenin-Trotsky "Intellectual revolution" of 1917, and this new "economic" revolution in which he wrapped up the "five year plan" which he characterizes as a magnificent, audacious dream—unless something breaks. And he prophesies that something is likely to break.)

Plan New Highway To Avoid Congestion

running directly from Trenton to New York.

This proposed highway, which is later to become part of a belt line around Philadelphia, will enable motorists to avoid many miles of the most congested part of the Lincoln Highway in Southern Bucks county and avoid the city of Trenton and other large places.

The Pennsylvania Highway Department has authorization to proceed with surveys and plans for the important link between the Roosevelt Boulevard and the Delaware. Plans are going ahead for the construction of the bridge, under the supervision of a joint commission of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, for carrying the highway over the Delaware. The New Jersey Highway Department has on its program the continuation of the highway from the river to its connection with the Trenton-Holland Tunnel express highway.

Tuning in on the Talkies

THE movie colony takes its troubles lightly. For instance, it requires only a dab of film cement to mend "Broken Hearts of Hollywood."

"Love's Old Sweet Song" never sounds so convincing after a good record has been broken.

"The Desired Woman" usually associates with "Women They Talk About."

Sophie Tucker, who sings her songs as star of "Honky Tonk," describes a night club as "a honky tonk all dressed up and no where to go but jail."

It may be true that "Love Is Blind" but when it comes to an engagement ring it is not stone blind.

"The Law That Failed" was being discussed in movies away back in 1917. It must have been some other law.

"Love Without Question" holds one great advantage. It does away with a lot of goofy answers.

As star of "General Crack," his first talking picture, John Barrymore has gypsy blood in his veins and Armida forwards the plot at high pressure.

For "Double Feature" Day "Resurrection" "He Comes Up Smiling"

"Diurnal" is another politician who refuses to quit. He continues as a talkie, starring George Arliss.

Making "Sugar" From Sap There is an early run of sap this season. "The Sap From Syracuse" is a new play. Edward Everett Horton in "The Sap" starring in Warner Bros. current talkie.

tion with the Trenton-Holland Tunnel express highway.

The New Jersey express highway, with which Philadelphia will be connected by the link which avoids Trenton, is now completed from Trenton to a point west of Passaic River bridge. This concrete highway is as straight as a rifle barrel and as level as a bowling green, twenty-nine feet in paved width and fifty feet in graded width.

Traveling along it in the direction of New York, the only thing the motorist sees of Princeton are the Gothic spires of the university to the north. New Brunswick, too, is for him just the name of a town somewhere to his left. A $1,900,000 reinforced concrete bridge carries the highway across the Raritan River and beyond that stream Metuchen and Rahway lie over the highway's northern horizon.

Elizabeth is bypassed to the south, and south of Newark, where railroad yards present a fearsome barrier to motor travel, the highway rises on a viaduct ingeniously devised to avoid the tangling of traffic to and from New York with traffic to and from Newark.

At the junction of the express highway and the Lincoln Highway traffic descends at present from the viaduct to the street level. But there New Jersey will soon begin to spend $20,000,000 to construct a two-and-a-half-mile elevated highway to bring the motorist's dream to a happy ending.

When this elevated highway is completed the motorist will wake up at the entrance to the Holland Tunnel. Between the end of the present viaduct and the tunnel plaza he will have crossed the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers on bridges 135 feet high and will have laughed with joy for the freedom thus given him from those old drawbridge menaces at those waterways.

When the highway and bridge linking this primrose path of motoring with the Roosevelt Boulevard is completed, Philadelphians will be able to motor to New York as fast as the law will allow and encounter no more traffic congestion than an airplane pilot.

Plans for the future look even further than merely connecting the Roosevelt Boulevard with the New Jersey express highway and avoiding Trenton. It is proposed part of the linking highway this side of Yardley will become a segment of a belt line encircling Philadelphia and speeding through traffic to the south.

This belt line, according to present plans, is to swing north of Philadelphia, cross the Schuylkill this side of Conshohocken, traverse the outer section of the Main Line and head southward to serve Delaware State communities and to carry traffic on to Baltimore and Washington.

In this way freedom from the threat of traffic congestion will be extended to motorists from suburban Philadelphia bound for New York as well as to motorists from points south of this city.

"Konjola saved me from becoming a physical wreck," said Mr. George B. Boyes, 325 North Front street, Camden, N. J. "I suffered from no specific ailment, but my general health had become so poor that I could no longer do my work. I had so little appetite that food did not tempt me. I did not sleep at night and my nerves were in a bad condition. I was weak and run-down from undernourishment and lack of proper sleep."

"I tried many medicines before my friends prevailed upon me to try Konjola. I had not finished with the first bottle before I knew I had found the right tonic, and it was a tonic that I needed. I took six bottles in all and feel better than I have felt in ten years. My appetite is splendid and I eat plenty of nourishing foods. I sleep wonderfully at night and my nerves are calm and steady. I have gained many pounds in weight and am stronger than I have been in years. What a medicine Konjola is!"

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

GOITRE NOT A DISEASE

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. F26, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. "Reds" Bailey and "Dates" Pegley were the scoring stars, the former accounting for nine field goals and the latter seven. Joe Moss, burly guard, took the ball up the floor to net four goals. Metcalf, facing a taller man, was getting the jump on him, while Ruehl also played a good game.

Coxon and Hibbs played well for the losers.

Last week a House bill appropriation of $4,250,000 for the improvement and maintenance of the Delaware River channel and several subsidiaries, was passed. The funds for the channel

Tuning in on the Talkies by Walthill

THE movies indulge in many needless alarms. As an instance, they signal "Beware of Blondes" while thousands of brave men flout the warning every day.

Traffic in the movies will flow more freely when "The Narrow Street" becomes "Wide Open" as a talkie.

Hiccoughs are difficult to reproduce for the talkies and it is said to be impossible for a man to stand right up to the microphone and hiccough with a clove in his mouth.

Winnie Lightner becomes a full-fledged talkie star in "She Couldn't Say No."

"Publicity Madness" is what causes newlyweds to jump from airplanes the moment they are spilled.

Had they done no other service the talkies get credit for doing away with the threadbare blurb "Come the Dawn."

For "Double Feature" Day
"The Eternal Question"
"Blonde or Brunette"

Fence-Rail Talkies
Farmer Silo says: "My boy in college is building a strong character. He's got so he can resist anything but temptation."

They Converse by Electricity
George Arliss will soon be heard in a Vitaphone version of his stage play, "The Green Goddess."
Walter Woolf, who was star of "Golden Dawn" on the stage, will star in Warner Bros. vocal screening of that operetta.

Al Jolson has gone concert touring around the world. He left his "Mammy" behind in the form of a single and talkie.

20th Century Jean Valjean

Charles Young, pictured with his wife and children, aged 46, escaped from an Auburn prison camp in New York State on March 9, 1920. After nine years spent in earning an honest living, during which time he has married and had four children, Young has fallen into the hands of New York authorities at Philadelphia and will be taken back to prison to serve the remaining year and a half of his three-year sentence. The identification of the escaped prisoner followed his arrest because of alleged stolen goods found in his possession.

Another Royal Marriage in Rome?

Boris III, King of Bulgaria, and Princess Giovanna of Italy may bring a union of European royalty again this year. Boris had an audience with His Holiness Pope Pius XI, thus reviving rumors that he is seeking the hand in marriage of Princess Giovanna. The difficulty in the way of the match is a difference in religion between the two. Boris, by the constitution of Bulgaria, must belong to the Orthodox

Greek Church, while the Princess is of the Roman Catholic Church. Thus far it has been impossible for Boris to obtain the necessary dispensation from the Pontiff for the nuptials. A solution which has been considered is that the Princess retain her religion and bring up her children as Catholics, except her first-born, who would be reared in the Orthodox Greek religion in order to succeed Boris on the Bulgarian throne.

Rome Roared Itself Hoarse

Crown Prince Humbert of Italy and his fiancée, Princess Marie Jose, as they appeared upon a balcony of the Quirinal Palace to greet a throng that packed every corner of the square below and overflowed into the contiguous streets. It was the first formal appearance of the pretty Belgian princess before the people whose queen she will one day become, and the enthusiasm of the assembled Romans mounted to a fever pitch. The young couple are shown smilingly acknowledging the cheers of the crowd.

Alleged Kidnapping of Bristol Girl Believed Solved; Friend of Man Implicated Says Couple Had Been Married And That They Will Come to Bristol Tonight

It is believed that what has been currently rumored as an alleged kidnapping of a Bristol girl has been solved. Shortly before five o'clock this afternoon Chief of Police Linford J. Jones was in telephonic communication with a man in Philadelphia who promised to produce both the man and the girl in the mystery at the Bristol police station tonight at eight o'clock. The couple, according to this Philadelphia resident, were married in Belair, Maryland, yesterday. "I saw the marriage certificate last night," the Philadelphian is quoted as informing Chief Jones. "They were married in Belair, Md., by a Presbyterian minister whose name is E. Clay Swister."

Tuesday at noon the two Bristol girls, Helen E. Angus, 17, 232 Monroe street, accompanied by Valeria Leighton, 16, 310 Hayes street, left their employment at a factory in a nearby town, and took a trolley to return to their homes here, according to the Leighton girl.

The Leighton girl states that they came as far as Dorrance and Radcliffe streets, Bristol, on the trolley. The pair then got off of the car, and the Leighton girl says she sent word into St. Mark's School to a girl friend of hers to come up to her house that night. The two girls then walked out Dorrance street, and were caught in a rain storm.

They went into one of the buildings of a local industry to seek shelter from the rain, and there came into contact with two men who were unloading material outside. After engaging in conversation the girls left and walked over in the vicinity of the post office. While walking in the direction of their homes the men whom they had met drove up in a truck and asked the girls to take a ride. The two girls got in, and were driven to Frankford where they left the truck, got into a black sedan, and were driven back to Bristol. "I got out of the car on Farragut avenue," says Miss Leighton, "and Helen stayed in to go to her home."

Since that time no one in Bristol has seen the Angus girl. When she failed to return home after a reasonable time her relatives began a search, and the police were notified. Chief Jones has been working on the case since that time, and learned the identity of the driver of the truck as well as the identity of some of his friends. This afternoon shortly before five o'clock one of the men who were on the truck in which the girls went for a ride reported at the Bristol police station. He told Chief Jones that his friend, Russell C. Niel, 4218 Howard street, Philadelphia, and the Bristol girl, whose name he did not know, had been married in Maryland yesterday. Upon further questioning he told Chief Jones that a man in Philadelphia by the name of George VanAustin, Cottage and Conley streets, had told him that he had seen Niel's marriage certificate. VanAustin was located and informed that Niel was wanted in Bristol, and that his friend who was now at the police station would be held until Niel and the Angus girl were produced. VanAustin stated that he knew where the couple were and would have them at the Bristol police station tonight at eight o'clock.

According to reports in Philadelphia newspapers last night, a marriage license was refused to Niel and the Angus girl at Elkton because of the youthfulness of the girl.

Miss Sara Silbert, of 117 Radcliffe street, was a Tuesday dinner guest of relatives in Drexel Hill.

More About the Merry Masqueraders By "The Stroller"

An article of interest to Bristol readers appeared in the latest issue of the Quakertown Free Press. It was published in the editorial columns of that paper and is herewith given in full:

Looks as though we had started something. Last week's comment on the Merry Masqueraders brought forth a reply from one whom, now that he has written us, we can picture as getting a big "kick" out of that organization thirty years ago. Read what Chauncey Stoneback, ex-Burgess of Quakertown, now prosperous and popular business man of Bristol, has to say:

"I notice in your editorials of this week that you mention the Masqueraders of thirty years ago. I remember it very well, and it made me sit and study to remember some of the other fellows who were it, namely, John V. Ommeren, Richard Kramer, C. Taylor Leland, Mr. Davis, superintendent of the trolley; Reuben J. Freed, of Richlandtown, and about thirty others whose names I cannot remember.

"We certainly were it." I remember we congregated in the old trolley depot on East Broad street, and when we were ready to leave there we took a trolley to Richlandtown and to Perkaskie, then returned to George Moser's restaurant where we had a wonderful banquet. (?) except myself. I had a beautiful black silk dress on, and fur coat, large hat and wonderful blonde curls.

"My trouble was, I had to draw myself in so as to get a corset on to get inside of the dress. Everything was O. K. until I sat down to eat. I found it was drawn together, I could not eat. So I hurried home on Front street to get my corset off—could not unhook it, so Friend Wife used a butcher knife and cut the strings in the rear (I think they are called strings) and I sat for one hour trying to get my lungs filled again. Hope you can get the gang together (what are left of us.) But no more corsets for me!"

Thanks, Chauncey, for this choice bit of history. You have revealed a mine of memories that we hope will be "opened and worked" to the utmost satisfaction of all concerned and interested.

And now that the ball has started rolling, our next move is to lay the proposition before the Hallowe'en committee and ask their support in having a reunion of the Merry Masqueraders of Thirty Years Ago.

In the meantime we'll have to ask Reuben, Dick and some of the others if they have any "confession" to make.

FRAZIER HUNT, NOTED WRITER, TELLS ABOUT THE IDEALS OF SOVIET RUSSIA

Gives Startling Pen Picture of the Crusading Spirit Which Is Driving Russia's Backward Millions to Industrialization, With Its Two Great Goals: Slogan, "Be Like America"

(Editor's Note.—This is the first of a series of six articles on the "New Revolution in Russia," which Frazier Hunt, noted newspaper man, war correspondent, magazine writer, staff writer and editorial representative in Europe for Cosmopolitan Magazine, has written especially for the Courier and other International News Service clients.

Mr. Hunt has written about Russia before. He knows Russia. He is one of the very few among the great many who have written about Russia in the past eleven years who has been able to grasp the new psychology of the Soviet movement. In this series of articles he brings this psychology so close to the reader that the latter recognizes it for a real, living, animate being.

Eleven years ago, when the newspapers and magazines of the United States, and most other countries of the world, were prophesying the collapse of the "Red" movement, and military leaders of other countries were planning military invasions of Russia to stifle the "Red" movement, Mr. Hunt, alone, in Moscow lifted his voice to remark: "This thing is real; it is alive, it will live."

Mr. Hunt "covered" the World War on the western front, the Versailles Conference, and he has been able to obtain the first copy of the Versailles Treaty, "covered" the American and allied expeditions in Siberia and is the only newspaper correspondent who ever obtained a personal interview with the Prince of Wales.

In his first article Mr. Hunt gives a startling picture of the crusading spirit which is driving Russia's backward millions to industrialization and mechanization. This crusading spirit has a preliminary or temporary goal, and a final, idealized goal.

The first goal is to "be like America." The second, the idealized goal, is to "catch up with and pass America," in high-speed, industrialized, mechanized production.

How to do this? Mr. Hunt tells you.)

LONDON, Jan. 15.—"Learn from your enemies!"

That is what Lenin preached—and that is the story of Russia.

Today Soviet Russia is being Americanized, so that she can win the world from America. She is learning from her enemies.

It is the greatest story in the world. It is the greatest story of the century—greater than the World War—the passing of half the monarchs of Europe—greater than the death of ten million men and the destruction of five hundred billion dollars worth of property.

One who writes of the Soviet union today is writing history. It is future history—the future that must be weighed and told in terms of the past and the present.

America has caught the imagination of Russia; the efficiency of our machine age, our mechanization and industrialization has captured the kind of every living man in this great sprawling land that stretches over one-sixth of the face of the globe. The dull peasant in the most distant "Dark Village" in Russia has heard the hum of the American machine, brought to his ears by the magic waves of ideas that know no international boundaries of respect no international barriers.

It is America's day in Russia. "Stavka Na America" is the newest slogan—"Bet on America."

Then there is "Catch Up With and Pass America."

And then the third: "Kato Kogo?"

BRISTOL TO BENEFIT FROM DEEPER RIVER

Dredging of Channel to 20 Feet Expected to Bring Industries Here

MONEY APPROPRIATED

Bristol is keenly interested and like other towns along the Delaware River expects to benefit from the deepening of the river channel to a depth of 20 feet.

What the completion of this channel, which will permit vessels of heavier draft, such as are engaged in the coastal trade, to ascend the Delaware, tapping the areas along the river banks, will mean, is seen in the prediction of Richard Weglein, Director of Wharves, Docks and Ferries.

"Ten years after the work on the twenty-foot channel is completed we will see the entire district on both sides of the Delaware lined with manufacturing plants," he said. "Beyond the limits of Philadelphia there will be a development all the way to Trenton."

Industrial development bordering the Delaware above Philadelphia has been retarded by the inability of the larger draft vessels to ascend the river, he points out. The twenty-foot channel will admit direct shipments from the plants already there and those which will be attracted into that area, besides increasing the flow of business from the many plants already in operation.

Lieutenant Colonel G. B. Pillsbury, the Philadelphia district engineer, has pointed out that with Trenton now a party to the project, the work on the new twenty-foot channel may be started this season. The program

ONE HUNDRED IN JAIL LAST YEAR ON BOOZE CHARGE

Fifty Others Were Committed For Short Terms For Drunkenness

490 PRISONERS IN 1929

Five Hundred and Twenty-One Were Discharged In Year

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16.—Prohibition has failed to decrease the number of prisoners that get into the Bucks County Prison according to the figures taken from the docket of Head Keeper Grant Myers.

During 1929 there were exactly 100 persons committed to the prison to stand trial in court for violation of the liquor laws and for a violation of the automobile law that makes it a crime to operate an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. This is an increase over the previous year.

In addition to the liquor law violators and drunken drivers there were approximately fifty others committed to the prison to serve short terms for being drunk and disorderly in 1929.

During 1929 there were 490 prisoners committed to the prison and 521 were discharged, sixty others being held over from 1928. There were twenty-nine prisoners on the docket on January 1, 1930. The average number of prisoners per day in 1929 was 50, a slight decrease over the previous year.

The Court sentenced sixty defendants to serve terms in the county prison in 1929. Justices of the peace sentenced eighty-six defendants to serve terms on summary convictions.

During 1929 there were 246 defendants discharged from the prison by Justices of the Peace. These defendants never got into the county court.

There were twenty-four juveniles in the house of detention in 1929, an under sixteen.

There were twenty-eight women incarcerated in the county prison in 1929, a considerable increase over 1928. This was due to several raids on road houses.

The prison docket shows that four murderers were in prison last year. Calvin D. James was electrocuted last January; Giuseppe Guida is sentenced to die on February 3; Maria Tilotta was sentenced to life imprisonment for second degree murder; and Guiseppe Guicardo was sentenced to life imprisonment for second degree murder.

BURIAL TODAY OF BODY FOUND IN WOODS NEAR HERE

Burial was made here today of the body of a man found in a wood near the Neshaminy Creek at Bridgewater last Friday afternoon. Interment was made in Bristol Cemetery by the H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers, at whose morgue the body has been since discovery.

The man, who is believed to be a suicide, was found by Harry C. Bosler, of 561 Otter street.

The dead man was believed to be John Schmit, of 2543 North Second street, Philadelphia. When found there was beside the body an empty bottle which had contained a disinfectant, and a newspaper with pencilled notes upon it.

One of the notations read: "All information about John Schmit at 2543 North Second street, Philadelphia. Upon inquiry at that address by Philadelphia Detective Bureau, the occupants of the house would not claim the body."

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16.—Judge Hiram H. Keller directed that a non-suit be entered in the case of Fremont Bowman, of Philadelphia, against Russell Cooper, of Newtown. Suit was brought following a sale of seed potatoes that were shipped to a Newtown farmer, now deceased, but who formerly rented from the defendant.

In the case of the Haboro Trust Company, claimant, against The Charles H. Salmon Building and Loan Association, a jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the goods claimed. The case was heard before Judge Samuel E. Shull.

A jury in Court No. 2 awarded Joseph M. Cornell, of Churchville, a verdict for $1,393.25 in a suit brought against Jennie A. Thomas, of Northampton township. The case was tried before Judge Keller. Suit was brought to recover an amount due on goods purchased at a sale.

Trial started before Judge Keller of the case of Edmund Donnelly and Mrs. Ruth Donnelly, of Wilkes-Barre against Joseph G. Boess, Sr., of Philadelphia, in Court No. 2. The plaintiff is suing for damages alleged to have been sustained on the Lackawanna Trail at Kintnersville on August 19, 1928.

CROYDON BOYS' CLUB XI HAS ENJOYABLE BANQUET

On Saturday, January 11th, Croydon Boys' Club football team celebrated the ending of a successful season with a banquet held in the Blue Moon Inn. All those present had a very enjoyable evening.

After an excellent dinner the group was entertained by songs from Frank Crossley and James Lake. Charles Friday and George Smith explained how they got their start in the great football world. "Bob" Porter, coach of the successful team, spoke about the backing the boys gave during the season. After his oration he was presented with a gift from the members of the team.

Following the dinner the guests retired to the lobby where they danced and enjoyed themselves in general fun for the rest of the evening.

The toastmaster for the evening was Pat Moran, Jr. The master of ceremonies was Walter Forest, Sr.

This is the first banquet held by the Croydon B. C. and it was such a success that those present predicted a great future for the club and its team.

SOUND FINANCING

Debts and deficits being the bane of a nation's existence, it is not surprising that the American people begin 1930 at peace with themselves and all the world and with a kind word for the custodians of their public coffers at Washington.

From a treasury deficit of $168,475,696 a year ago the starting of the new year with a surplus of $91,644,655 beats the blue bird as a purveyor of happiness and trimming down the public debt another round billion dollars to a remainder of $16,300,921,501 is alone reason enough for national rejoicing.

The Coolidge administrations showed the public how important it is from the executive's viewpoint for the national government to end its year with a surplus, a pleasure the Hoover administration can look forward to as the fiscal year ending next June 30 is promised a nice surplus by the present treasury outlook.

Even with the reduction of the tax rate on 1929 incomes, which is computed in revenue dollars at $160,000,000 the surplus for the current fiscal year may be larger than is now expected. That is the promise held forth by the trend of income tax collections.

Another gratifying sign from the taxpayer's viewpoint is the treasury report that the expenditures of the federal government for the first half of the present fiscal year were considerably less than half of the budget for the entire year. That represents governmental economy and that means more than anything else to the tax-burdened public.

THE PUBLIC LANDS

It has been said that the mistakes of the federal government with regard to conservation have been due to politics rather than to policy. There is no reason, therefore, to believe that interference from politics would be lessened if the federal land reserves and public lands were to be transferred from federal control to the control of the states in which they are located. In fact, it is no secret that one of the reasons for the agitation to that end is that the local political and business interests which wish to have easier access to the lands and forest for purposes of exploitation would find the state authorities more amenable than the federal government. Remember the oil reserve scandal!

For the present, at least, the machinery can best be operated by the federal government. If the reserves are a white elephant on the hands of the administration at Washington, all the more reason for control to remain there. That white elephant might get worse treatment at the hands of several state governments that are even more at the mercy of grasping politicians than is the national government.

There will be cause for suspicion should the commonwealths having federal lands be found in a receptive mood when the national government makes a serious move to turn the lands over to the states. The history of state's rights and centralization of government contains few instances where the federal government has turned back powers to the commonwealths and where those powers have been gratefully received by the states. There is a nigger in the woodpile!

In spite of the way some look, no auto is more than 30 years old.

SYNOPSIS

Joe Lane, ex-pugilist, song plugger, and hit of the Q. R. S. A. radio station, gets a contract to make phonograph records through the efforts of Arthur Phillips, manager of the station. Phillips, who is infatuated with Katherine, Joe's wife, informs the girl that he is making Joe a success only for her sake. Katherine is furious, but fears to tell Joe, who believes Phillips to be his best friend, lest he quarrel with the manager. Joe promises to meet Katherine for lunch, but gets into a trap game instead. He finally arrives home where Katherine and the baby, Little Pal are waiting for him.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Junior, dear," Katherine ignored Joe's remark concerning his "condition" and turned her attention to the child. "Suppose you run along in the bedroom and Mother'll be with you in just a minute. You go ahead and begin to get undressed. It's almost time for the sandman." "Oh, let him stay one second," Joe pleaded. "I want him to hear my first record. It's the song I wrote to him. Just got it before I left the station. Wait 'til John McCormack hears it—"

"Joe, I'd rather you put Junior down. It's his bedtime," Katherine insisted coldly. "We'll play the record later."

Slowly Joe set the child down on the floor. He realized that Katherine was angry. But she had been angry before. He had always been able to talk her out of various moods. He did feel slightly crushed, though. Here he had come home, full of good news and anxious to tell it, and Katherine and ill at ease. He hadn't really meant to do anything wrong, but somehow he always made a mess of things, he reflected. He could just as well have met Katherine, as he had promised. But he had got interested in the crap game; began winning money, and where the hours had gone he couldn't tell himself.

The sound of the bedroom door closing turned him about. Katherine stood there, facing him. "Joe," she began, "I want to have a little talk with you."

CHAPTER IV

Joe squirmed uneasily. He was in for it now. Like Little Pal, he realized that when Katherine spoke in that tone of voice and said she wanted to talk to him, she meant business. He braced himself for the ordeal. Well, he deserved all she was going to say, he told himself.

"Now, listen, honey," Joe went over to Katherine, his eyes downcast. "Don't put the saddle on me. I know I've caused you a lot of trouble. I'm irresponsible, like you say, and all over the place. But you know how much I love you. And maybe if I wasn't so sorta batty I wouldn't be a song plugger at all. I'd be a bricklayer or something."

"Possibly," Katherine returned coldly. "And possibly we'd be happier if you were." She walked past Joe and went over to the grand piano, leaning against it. "We're not sure of that either, Joe."

"Aw, Kitty, darling! Don't say that," Joe begged. "You know you don't mean it. Why, I'm crazy about you. Say, did all this come outa my standin' you up this afternoon and takin' a few drinks with the boys?"

"No, it wasn't that, Joe. It wasn't just because of that time. But because of the dozens of times you've forgotten and neglected me."

"Oh, I know; but, sweetheart, I won't do it again. Honest, I won't. This is the last time. I promise!"

"Joe, if I hear you say 'I promise' once more I'll—I'll—"

Kitty floundered for words. "I don't know what I'll do. You've told me that one hundred times if you've told me once. Every time you say it I think you mean it, and then I find out right away you don't."

"Aw, Kitty," Joe wandered across the room and tried to take the girl in his arms. "I know I ain't good enough for you—I never was. But I'd do anything in the world for you."

Katherine evaded Joe's caresses. "It isn't a question of goodness," she tried to explain. "It's more a question of dispositions—of nature. I'm staid and conventional, I suppose. You're happy-go-lucky, careless—well, I don't know." She shook her head wearily. "We all have a right to be what we are. Maybe your way is the best—maybe mine is. No one can say, but—"

"But, honey, if you don't like me like I am I'll change." Joe offered eagerly. "I'll make myself over just for you."

"It can't be done, Joe," she insisted. "Sure it can't," Joe insisted. "Why, look how I've changed already since I met you. Gee, I'm certainly a lot different from that palooka prizefighter I was when you first saw me. Don't you remember, Kitty?"

His voice was pleading, yet withal, a little gay. Memories came flooding back to him—memories that he wanted to bring to Kitty. "Remember how hard I fell for you the very first time I saw you?" he reminded her. "Me, up there in the hospital, all battered up, and you so white and beautiful in your nurse's uniform. Honestly, the first time I saw you I thought I'd died and gone to Heaven. I thought you were an angel. No kidding, I did—until I smelled the antiseptic."

Katherine didn't even smile. "We got started wrong, Joe," she shook her head. "You remember you told me you had been hurt in an automobile accident. You didn't tell me you were a prize fighter. And I believed you—just like I've gone on believing you. You lied to me from the very first. Oh, it was no way to do. I see it now."

"Sure, I lied to you, darling," Joe thrust his hands into his pockets and began walking about the room. "I wasn't gonna tell you I got all smeared up in a scrap. I know you wouldn't like that. I could tell that just by lookin' at you. But, gee whiz, when a fellow's in love with a girl he ain't responsible for what he says. And a guy's entitled to lie a little when he's makin' love."

"Joe, what's the use of all this," Kitty sank dejectedly onto the piano bench. "We've gone over it again and again. Our marriage was a mistake, that's all."

Joe's hands clenched tightly in his pockets. He closed his eyes, hard, for a moment. "You loved me when you married me, didn't you, Kitty?" He tried to keep his voice steady.

"Yes, Joe, with all my heart."

"But—but you don't love me any more. Is that it?"

wanted to lecture him. He could sense it coming. Of course he shouldn't have kept her waiting, but there were times when a lot of things might be excused—a time like this, for instance.

"Mamma, I want to hear Daddy's record," Little Pal took up the battle. "Daddy, I can hear the record, can't I?"

Joe looked at Katherine; Junior looked at Katherine, both waiting for her answer. And Joe, as he stood there, wore the same expression on his face as Junior. It was a begone, child-like expression.

But about Katherine's lips there crept little lines of grim determination. She seemed so stern, so evidently resolute, that for once Joe was almost frightened.

"Run right along, Junior," she commanded, going over to the French doors that opened out into the bedrooms and unlatching them. Junior reached up his arms to his father for one last kiss. There was no denying his mother when she assumed that tone. It meant that he was to do exactly as he was told. He clutched his father tightly about the neck as Joe swung him up again in his arms. At that moment there seemed to be a bond of sympathy between the two which Katherine recognized, even in her anger. And it made it all the harder for her to carry out her resolutions.

"Run along, now, Little Pal, like Mamma says," Joe whispered tenderly to the child. "Daddy's gonna sing over the radio tonight, and then you can hear him just like on the record. Daddy's gonna sing your song."

"Aw, wight, Daddy," Fortified with his father's promise the child was content to be put down. Katherine took the boy's hand and led him into the bedroom.

As the pair disappeared Joe began to frown thoughtfully. He picked up the package he had thrown aside when he came in and slowly unwrapped it, holding up a victrola record—his very first. He had felt so much pleasure in seeing it earlier in the day, but now all his joy was gone, and he felt lost.

ANNOUNCE NEW TRUCK WHICH HAS SPEED

Rugged Chassis Construction Is Also Feature of The Willys-Knight

CAR ON DISPLAY HERE

Speed comparable to that of passenger cars, with the extreme power and rugged chassis construction necessary to satisfy the severest demands of modern day commercial transportation, is found in the new Willys Six 1½ ton truck announced by Willys-Overland. Four speed transmission and 65 horsepower engine meet all the requirements for heavy hauling and provide unusually satisfactory performance on the highway, according to J. H. Watson, local distributor.

Announcement of this truck, together with a new Willys-Knight truck as additions to the already large truck line manufactured by Willys-Overland, reveals a new idea in commercial car manufacture which, for the first time, gives the commercial car buyer as large a range of selection as is offered the purchaser of a passenger car.

Opportunity to select exactly the type of commercial car best fitted for any particular work is expected to make possible the replacement of many heavy duty trucks by lighter equipment, such as the Willys-Six, with a resultant saving in capital invested, operating cost and depreciation.

With these two additions, Willys-Overland now offers a four cylinder and a six cylinder truck in the one-half ton class, the speedy new Willys Six, Model C 101, and the Willys-Knight, Model T-103, in the ¾ to 1½ ton class, and the heavy duty Willys-Knight trucks in the 2 and 2½ ton class. In addition to these are the commercial roadsters and coupes, intended primarily as salesmen's cars and designed to permit the installation of open and closed bodies of the slip-on type.

To provide added strength, stamina and reliability, all the vital parts of Willys-Overland trucks, such as frame, transmission, clutch, propeller shaft, rear axle, wheels, rims, etc., are special truck parts, no passenger car units being used.

Distribution and servicing of these trucks will be accomplished through the nationwide Willys-Overland dealer organization, all members of which will be equipped to give specialized service on all Willys-Overland trucks, as well as to arrange for the selection and delivery of the various types of bodies desired.

This will make it possible for a truck owner to secure repairs, parts and service wherever he may be without the customary delay and is expected to be of immense value to the fleet operator who might otherwise have units of his fleet laid up where service is not available.

Through cooperation between Willys-Overland sales and engineering departments and the leading builders of commercial bodies, a national distribution of high grade body types to fit every need of commercial use has been effected. Arrangements have been made so that the buyer of a commercial chassis will be able to select the particular type of body he prefers and have it delivered by the body manufacturers with his chassis, thus making possible immediate assembly and eliminating delays.

The New Willys Six Truck
Advanced engineering, evident throughout the construction of the new Willys Six 1½ ton truck, promises long life and low depreciation, safety and ease of operation, with extremely low mileage costs. The high speed of this model has been achieved without sacrifice of any of the qualities of reliability, safety or stamina essential in a commercial car. It has been designed primarily to lower the cost of deliveries and speed up distribution of merchandise.

Notable among the mechanical features is the four speed forward transmission which should have a marked appeal for all truck operators, providing as it does added pulling ability in low gears and the ability to make a quick start with a capacity load. The high gear provides smooth speed on straightaways.

The engine is entirely new and develops an actual 65 horsepower at 3200 r. p. m. It has a 3¼ inch bore, a 3½ inch stroke and a piston displacement of 192.9 cubic inches. The motor is of the efficient L head type, with cylinders and crankcase cast en bloc. The cylinder head is removable.

The Willys Six has a wheelbase of 131 inches, designed to accommodate a wide variety of body types, including the panel body, fully enclosed with two rear doors, which meets the requirements of many kinds of business; the canopy top body with curtains at the sides and rear to provide protection for merchandise in bad weather which is especially desirable for grocers, butchers and most retail stores; the screen body type with a gate that locks to provide protection for merchandise, mail, etc., against theft; a stake body with extra large capacity for contractors, express companies, wholesalers and farmers; and the popular open express type with roomy comfortable driving compartment.

One of the most important features of the Willys Six truck is the rear axle, which is of the semi-floating type with heavy spiral bevel gears, and the electric furnace cast steel axle housing. The extreme rigidity of this housing prevents all sagging that might tend to throw parts out of alignment and assures long life for all moving parts.

"Finger-Tip Control" which has proved so satisfactory on Willys-Overland passenger cars, has been provided in the Willys Six truck. This enables the driver to control all the functions of starting the motor, operating the lights and sounding the horn by the button in the center of the steering wheel without changing driving position, and is a distinct safety factor.

The new Willys Knight 1½ ton truck which will be known as Model T-103, answers in a general way all the qualifications of the new Willys Six except that a sleeve valve engine of unusual strength and reliability is employed. Bodies for the two are interchangeable, since they are intended to serve in the same general class.

The T-103 has a heavy seven-bearing crankshaft and a piston displacement of 177.9 cubic inches with a bore of 2 15-16 and a stroke of 4 3-8.

Records That Can't Be Broken

THE PEN may be mightier than the sword, but it isn't half as powerful as the new material that is to be used for phonograph records. If the newsreel pictures and the talkies are accurate criteria the pen together with the printing press may be due for a long vacation. And the spoken word will indeed be ruler of a new kingdom where newspapers and magazines will emerge in the guise of phonograph records.

The new and wonderful material announced recently by Doctors Louis Hammett and George H. Walden, Jr. is called "Durium" and is all that its name implies. For it is durable to the point of unbreakability and of equal flexibility, making it ideal for phonograph records in particular. But not the old type of record that dropped when any one looked at it. Not by a long shot! The new durium records can do duty as a tea-pot stand, a dinner plate, a door-mat or a nice toy for baby without in the least impairing their efficiency or tonal properties.

Durium is so inexpensive that it is planned to issue standard sized records each week, to be retailed at 15 cents apiece through such agencies of distribution as newsstands and various retail stores in much the same way as the weekly magazine is marketed. It is easy from this to visualize the time when the weekly paper will consist of records amplifying the newsreel pictures that have taken such a hold on popular imagination. Talking pictures will also be made of durium, which has the added advantage of emerging from the mails intact regardless of the handling to which it has been subjected.

All this seems so far away from the little brittle wax disc that was used by Thomas Edison to record voices by his phonograph. It was so soft that after having been played for admiring neighbors a few times its easily marred surface was so scratched or chipped that one of Sousa's marches sounded like a record of a menagerie of wild animals before feeding time. And now that the new material promises us practically unbreakable records, in addition to all the other marvels of the age, we may still witness a revival of the gramophone that has of late been eclipsed by so many other marvels. We may even read our recorded newspapers from it.

(International Newsreel)

Tuning in on the Talkies

CONTAINERS take talkies to hundreds of towns that would never see the plays and players arrive on a passenger train.

"Not a Dram Was Heard" in silent films. Now listen to 'em!

"The Woman Who Walked Alone" had probably just kicked a fresh escort on the shins.

"The Price Woman Pays" is usually gaudy by what she considers is a bargain.

"Hell's Oasis" depends for popularity on future bookings.

"Fools in the Dark" whistle on their fingers and stamp their feet.

Sally O'Neill and Monte Blue and Myrna Loy principally inhabit "The Isle of Escape." Happily they will be on speaking terms via Vitaphone.

"The Tie That Binds" usually makes a fellow hot under the collar.

"The Unfair Sex" is the opposite sex, of course.

For "Double Feature" Day "Out All Night" "That's My Daddy"

Fence-Rail Talkies
Farm Silo says: "My boy in college tells me they have traffic problems in the city. My traffic problem is to keep him behind the mules and between plow-handles."

Talk About Your Talkies
Sally O'Neill will cavort soubtrifishly in "Hold Everything."

Marian Nixon will make an extremely "Sweet Kitty Bellairs."

Warner Bros. started a lot of talk when they introduced Vitaphone.

For the several millenth time Al Jolson will rhyme "Alabama" with "Mammy" in his new "single."

Frazier Hunt, Tells About Ideals of Soviet Russia

cars, she loves, the individualism, the concentration of wealth.

The whole "capitalistic system" (and how they delight in mauling these words) she hates.

She hates it with all the ardor and depth of sincerity that a young priest of the great Jesuit crusades hated the infidels and the works of the devil loose in the world.

For to understand this vast Russian scene one must accept the fact that the power and driving force of this communistic government and ideal is the power and force of a crusading religion. Whether we like it or not this is true, and it is absolutely necessary to grasp this great truth.

Communist youths are today young priests of this new militant faith. They have the look in their eyes. They fear nothing. They will gladly sacrifice their lives, their future, their all, for their dream of a new, classless moneyless world, where all men are the same; where there are no distinctions of any kind; where white and brown and yellow and black men are brothers and equals.

They dream of building a great new world that will be better than America can build.

So it is that Russia and America struggle for the world—for this very soul of the world.

It is a strange new war—a bloodless war. It is not for trade, nor territories, nor any of the old ideas of victory and conquest that the empires of the past fought for. It is a silent war of ideals struggling against each other for the heart and imagination of the world.

And America is building up Russia to prepare her for the epic struggle.

We are showing her how to construct great factories, magnificent electric plants, giant mills, to harness her rivers, produce her white coal, how to treble the output of her black coal to coax water from distant rivers to make rich cotton and fruit lands from parched and thirsty deserts; how to put motor cars on her muddy roads and then build roads of macadam; how to put tens of thousands of tractors on her endless rich acres; how to buy shoes and clothes and silk stockings and electric light and radio and the thousand little comforts and amenities of life for her hungry and tired families.

(Editor's Note: In tomorrow's article Mr. Hunt explains the difference between the Lenin-Trotsky "Intellectual revolution" of 1917, and this new "economic" revolution in which is wrapped up the "five year plan" which he characterizes as a magnificent, audacious dream—unless something breaks. And he prophesies that something is likely to break.)

"KONJOLA SURELY BEST MEDICINE IN THE WORLD"

Shattered Health Rapidly Restored by Action of New and Different Medicine

MR. GEO. B. BOYES

"Konjola saved me from becoming a physical wreck," said Mr. George B. Boyes, 325 North Front street, Camden, N. J. "I suffered from no specific ailment, but my general health had become so poor that I could no longer do my work. I had so little appetite that food did not tempt me. I did not sleep at night and my nerves were in a bad condition. I was weak and run-down from undernourishment and lack of proper sleep."

"I tried many medicines before my friends prevailed upon me to try Konjola. I had not finished with the first bottle before I knew I had found the right tonic, and it was a tonic that I needed. I took six bottles in all and feel better than I have felt in ten years. My appetite is splendid and I eat plenty of nourishing foods. I sleep wonderfully at night and my nerves are calm and steady. I have gained many pounds in weight and am stronger than I have been in years. What a medicine Konjola is!"

around Philadelphia, will enable motorists to avoid many miles of the most congested part of the Lincoln Highway in Southern Bucks county and avoid the city of Trenton and other large places.

The Pennsylvania Highway Department has authorization to proceed with surveys and plans for the important link between the Roosevelt Boulevard and the Delaware. Plans are going ahead for the construction of the bridge, under the supervision of a joint commission of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, for carrying the highway over the Delaware. The New Jersey Highway Department has on its program the continuation of the highway from the river to its connection with the Trenton-Holland Tunnel express highway.

The New Jersey express highway, with which Philadelphia will be connected by the link which avoids Trenton, is now completed from Trenton to a point west of Passaic River Bridge. This concrete highway is as straight as a rifle barrel and as level as a bowling green, twenty-nine feet in paved width and fifty feet in graded width.

Traveling along it in the direction of New York, the only thing the motorist sees of Princeton are the Gothic spires of the university to the north. New Brunswick, too, is for him just the name of a town somewhere to his left. A $1,500,000 reinforced concrete bridge carries the highway across the Raritan River and beyond that stream Metuchen and Rahway lie over the highway's northern horizon.

Elizabeth is bypassed to the south, and south of Newark, where railroad yards present a fearsome barrier to motor travel, the highway rises on a viaduct ingeniously devised to avoid the tangling of traffic to and from New York with traffic to and from Newark.

At the junction of the express highway and the Lincoln Highway traffic descends at present from the viaduct to the street level. But there New Jersey will soon begin to spend $20,000,000 to construct a two-and-a-half-mile elevated highway to bring the motorist's dream to a happy ending.

When this elevated highway is completed the motorist will wake up at the entrance to the Holland Tunnel. Between the end of the present viaduct and the tunnel plaza he will have crossed the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers on bridges 135 feet high and will have laughed with joy for the freedom thus given him from those old drawbridge menaces at those waterways.

Plans for the future look even further than merely connecting the Roosevelt Boulevard with the New Jersey express highway and avoiding Trenton. It is proposed part of the linking highway this side of Yardley will become a segment of a belt line encircling Philadelphia and speeding through traffic to the south.

This belt line, according to present plans, is to swing north of Philadelphia, cross the Schuylkill this side of Conshohocken, traverse the outer section of the Main Line and head southward to serve Delaware State communities and to carry traffic on to Baltimore and Washington.

In this way freedom from the threat of traffic congestion will be extended to motorists from suburban Philadelphia bound for New York as well as to motorists from points south of this city.

GOITRE NOT A DISEASE

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. F26, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. Write him today.—(Adv.)

Tuning in on
by Walhill

THE movies indulge in many needless alarms. As an instance, they signal "Beware of Blondes" while thousands of brave men flout the warning every day.

Traffic in the movies will flow more freely when "The Narrow Street" becomes "Wide Open" as a talkie.

Hiccoughs are difficult to reproduce for the talkies and it is said to be impossible for a man to stand right up to the microphone and hiccough with a clove in his mouth.

Winnie Lightner becomes a full-fledged talkie star in "She Couldn't Say No."

"Publicity Madness" is what causes newlyweds to jump from airplanes the moment they are spliced.

Had they done no other service the talkies get credit for doing away with the threadbare blurb "Come the Dawn."

Farmer Silo says: "My boy in college is building a strong character. He's got so he can resist anything but temptation."

They Converse by Electricity
George Arliss will soon be heard in a Vitaphone version of his stage play, "The Green Goddess."

Walter Woolf, who was star of "Golden Dawn" on the stage, will star in Warner Bros. vocal screening of that operetta.

Al Jolson has gone concert touring around the world. He left his "Mammy" behind in the form of a single and talkie.

20th Century Jean Valjean

After nine years spent in earning an honest living, during which time he has married and had four children. The identification of the escaped prisoner followed his arrest because of alleged stolen goods found in his possession.

Another Royal Marriage in Rome?

Boris III, King of Bulgaria, and Princess Giovanna of Italy may bring a union of European royalty again this year. Boris had an audience with His Holiness Pope Pius XI, thus reviving rumors that he is seeking the hand in marriage of Princess Giovanna. The difficulty in the way of the match is a difference in religion between the two. Boris, by the constitution of Bulgaria, must belong to the Orthodox

Greek Church, while the Princess is of the Roman Catholic Church. Thus far it has been impossible for Boris to obtain the necessary dispensation from the Pontiff for the nuptials. A solution which has been considered is that the Princess retain her religion and bring up her children as Catholics, except her first-born, who would be reared in the Orthodox Greek religion in order to succeed Boris on the Bulgarian throne.

Rome Roared Itself Hoarse

The young couple are shown smilingly acknowledging the cheers of the crowd.
